Rattan Fencing

What is Rattan?

Rattan is a plant found growing mainly on the continent of Indonesia in addition to smaller amounts growing in the Philippines and other smaller countries.

Rattan is one of many species of palms known in its scientific classification of Tribe as Calameae. Unlike most other palms, rattan grows more like a vine rather than a tree. The vine-like stems require support and thrive on trees and other vegetation to support them. Rattan grows quickly and withstands heavy harvesting. Rattan stems can grow hundreds of feet long retaining a diameter between matchstick size to about 2-1/2 in. (6 cm.) diameter along its length. These long consistent diameter sized branches make rattan a perfect material to be used in the construction of rattan furniture and other home decor products.

Why Rattan?

Many people love rattan because it adds warmth and brings a natural element to interior decor. It's also affordable, durable and accessible at all price levels.

Rattan is a natural resources product, from the jungle to your life. Natural resources, natural life. Environment friendly, and made in Indonesia.
